

GRADUATE STUDIES

SCHOOL OF EDUCATION

Drexel University's School of Education offers doctoral and master's degree programs, as well as a variety of post-bachelor's certification programs, to meet the needs of educators and educational administrators at all levels. The curriculum goes well beyond conventional teacher training, offering students the instructional skills to provide leadership in settings from the classroom to the boardroom.

Our faculty is directly engaged in formal and informal approaches to learning through schools and colleges, cultural organizations, and the community. Our graduates are known for their leadership, creativity, technological savvy, and preparedness. Because of this, the School of Education ranks among the top graduate schools of its kind in the nation.

As we move forward, seeking new opportunities and new collaborations, we continue to address the needs of a socially, economically, and racially diverse group of multigenerational learners.

Programs are constantly changing to meet industry needs. For the most up-to-date list, please visit drexel.edu/grad/soe.

MISSION

The School of Education develops leaders, researchers, and teachers who bring their knowledge and experiences to bear on critical education and learning challenges across a range of educational contexts, from those in the Philadelphia neighborhoods that surround Drexel to others around the globe. Our faculty and graduates have a powerful impact on the lives—from birth through advanced age—of the learners they serve. The direct effect they have on local communities and society at large is amplified through the guidance, partnerships, and preparation they offer to the next generation of teachers, leaders, and researchers.

FACULTY

In keeping with Drexel's focus on experiential education, faculty members in the School of Education are leaders in their fields, and many continue to be professionally active outside of the University. This relationship to the teaching profession benefits students, providing firsthand knowledge and useful contacts and resources in the Philadelphia area and beyond.

RESOURCES AND PARTNERSHIPS

In addition to the resources and facilities of the University, the School of Education also maintains strong relationships with school districts and other educational institutions across the country. Drexel's School of Education's Field Placement Office works with students to help them complete student teaching and co-op experiences. The School of Education's Philadelphia Teacher Residency program also helps career changers earn teaching certification and boasts a 100% job placement rate in Philadelphia schools.

PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia is the nation's fifth largest city, with a metropolitan population of over six million. It is renowned for its historical sites and the diversity of its neighborhoods, and as a center of the pharmaceutical, electronics, and finance industries.

The city offers countless arts, entertainment, and recreational attractions including museums, theaters, major league sports franchises, and one of the nation's largest urban park systems, as well as first-class shopping, dining, and nightlife.

ADMISSION

Admission for graduate study at Drexel University requires a bachelor's degree from an accredited institution in the United States or an equivalent international institution. Although admission requirements vary by program, regular admission typically requires a minimum grade point average (GPA) of 3.0 for the last two years of undergraduate work. The GPA for any graduate work must be at least 3.0. Applicants for post-master's status must show potential for further study by having maintained at least a 3.0 GPA in their master's-level studies. (Individual departmental requirements may exceed this minimum.)

The admissions committee evaluates all credentials submitted by applicants to determine a student's ability and potential to succeed in graduate study. In addition, the committee is interested in the applicant's ability to contribute to his/her program of study and to the University community as a whole.

Applicants may only apply to one program at a time. Apply online at drexel.edu/grad/apply.

FINANCING

Students must complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) to be considered for federal aid. Students must complete this form annually to determine eligibility. File online at fafsa.gov using Drexel's school code, 003256. To learn more, visit drexel.edu/grad/financing.

Merit-based aid in the form of fellowships and scholarships, as well as teaching, research, and graduate assistantships are awarded by the graduate departments based on availability of funds. You are automatically considered for merit scholarships; however, questions regarding assistantships should be directed to education@drexel.edu.
