CONFERENCE INFORMATION

Dear Colleagues:

This is the 25-year anniversary of the PA Forensic Rights and Treatment Conference. The conference began humbly with a group of advocates who were concerned about treatment of mentally ill persons at Farview State Hospital. From 1989 to 1995, Farview State Hospital and SCI Waymart operated as separate entities under the jurisdiction of two state agencies (DPW and DOC). In October 1995, Farview State Hospital, a maximum-security forensic psychiatric hospital, was placed under the jurisdiction of the Pennsylvania Department of Corrections and designated as a Forensic Treatment Center. The conference began during the period of joint ownership and the spirit of collaboration has strengthened throughout the years. We welcome you to this silver anniversary event.

BIOGRAPHIES OF PLENARY SPEAKERS

Howard Zehr, PhD

Widely known as “the grandfather of restorative justice,” Dr. Zehr began as a practitioner and theorist in restorative justice in the late 1970s, the foundational stage of the field. He has led hundreds of events in more than 25 countries and 35 states, including trainings and consultations on restorative justice, victim-offender conferencing, judicial reform, and other criminal justice matters. He has a BA from Morehouse College, a MA from the University of Chicago and a PhD from Rutgers University. In 1996 he joined the faculty of the Center for Justice & Peacebuilding, an international graduate program at Eastern Mennonite University. In 2013 Zehr retired from active classroom teaching but continues to be involved in the field through the Zehr Institute of Restorative Justice at the Center for Justice & Peacebuilding, Eastern Mennonite University. His books include Changing Lenses: A New Focus for Crime and Justice, The Little Book of Restorative Justice, and three photo/interview books: Doing Life: Reflections of Men and Women Serving Life Sentences, Transcending: Reflections of Crime Victims and What Will Happen to Me (children of incarcerated parents).

Jeanne Flavin, PhD

Jeanne Flavin is a Professor of Sociology at Fordham University in New York City. She has a BA from the University of Kansas and MA and PhD from American University. Her scholarship examines gender, crime, and justice. She wrote the award-winning Our Bodies, Our Crimes: Policing Women’s Reproduction in America (NYU, 2009), is co-editor of Race, Gender, and Punishment: From Colonialism to the War on Terror (Rutgers, 2007), and author of more than two dozen other scholarly publications. She accepted a Fulbright research award in 2009 to study gender, family, and crime in South Africa and was the 2013 recipient of a Sociologists for Women in Society award for social action. Currently, Dr. Flavin serves on the board of directors for National Advocates for Pregnant Women, an organization that defends the rights and dignity of pregnant women, including those whose mental health, drug use, race, or poverty make them vulnerable to arrest and prosecution. Jeanne grew up on a farm in rural Kansas.

Colwin Williams

Colwin Williams, an Outreach Worker for Philadelphia CeaseFire, speaks for change. He believes the youth of Philadelphia are killing themselves needlessly and senselessly. The biggest problem in his view, is that there are few black men to give the youth of Philadelphia the structure and tools necessary for them to be successful in society. He uses his words to motivate his team, encourage North Philadelphians to rally for peace following shootings, and to resolve conflicts. According to Colwin, gun violence in Philadelphia is more complicated than a proliferation of weapons on the street, or blurbs on the 10 p.m. news. Gun violence is a product of a culture of violence. According to Colwin, “the streets don’t have any love at all. It’s a sick relationship. You would think it would be easy for someone to say,” I don’t want this lifestyle, but when it’s learned behavior it becomes a part of who you are.” In addition to working at Temple University, Katz School of Medicine’s Philadelphia Ceasefire program, Colwin is a volunteer mentor for the Criminal Justice Center, a member of the City of Philadelphia’s Re-Entry Think Tank and a motivational speaker.

W01/W11

Brain Injury in Juvenile Justice Youth: A Hidden Disability
Monica Vaccaro, MS; MJ Schmidt, MA

Research indicates that brain injury is over-represented in the criminal justice system. Whether acquired through accident, disease or multiple injuries across time, brain injury affects individuals in profound ways. Often undiagnosed in this population, brain injury can affect academic and vocational success as well as both risk and responsivity to treatment. This session will provide basic education on brain injury, discuss literature on prevalence and effect of brain injury on youth in the system, and will describe a grant-funded project which seeks to identify and assist those youths. Screening tools and possible resources will also be discussed.

W02/W12

Community MH 101: What's Out There
Danny Beauchamp, BS, Stacy Tekely, MS; Hazel Dacus, MSW; Jessica Shires

This presentation will provide an overview of the variety of mental health treatment and support services available in the community mental health system. Details about the types of services, methods of treatment, and the criteria needing to be met for an individual to be referred will be discussed. Participants will be able to summarize community-based behavioral health services, compare different levels of care, and understand the necessary criteria to refer a person for services. A panel discussion will ensue with information about the requirements of the county referral and the reentry planning process.

W03/W13

How to Minister and Navigate with the Religiously Fixated Inmates
Rev. John Kowalczyk, DTh

In working with inmates, one will be confronted with individuals who have religious fixation or a religious delusional system. To navigate and carefully minister and separate the emotional and spiritual needs and at the same time affirm the dignity of the person, while maintaining custody and control, takes a good deal of work. This session will explore venues afforded as a contract Chaplain working at SCI Waymart. This experience is garnered from 30 years in the field and development of over eight thousand preliminary religious assessment for the treatment teams.

W04/W14

Tapping into Opportunities at the Front Door: Promising Diversion Strategies at Intercept 2
Christina M. Finello, JD, PhD; Kris Thompson, MSW; Carolynn Perry, BA; Wendy Flanigan, MS; Ana Rosado, MSW; Nicole Richardson; Ray McManamon, MA, LPC

Intercept 2 may hold the most unrealized potential for diversion. Bucks County has leveraged that opportunity to increase access to quality community-based services. This session will provide an overview of the Magisterial District Judge Mobile Engagement Pilot. Efforts will be highlighted that describe the planning, implementation, and outcome tracking for this pilot. The panel will discuss how this initiative has connected individuals to treatment and community supports, working in conjunction with the court system.

W05/W15

Social Determinants of Arrest and Incarceration: Perspectives of Community and Professional Stakeholders
Robert Marin, MD; Fred Brown; Regina Mollette, MS; Aaron Thomas; Willie West

This workshop presents the aims and conclusions of the recent conference, "Correcting Corrections: Road Map to the Mental Health of Our Communities," organized by the Center for Public Service Psychiatry of UPMC. The conference brought together community, correctional, and behavioral health stakeholders, including people with lived experience as inmates. The conference's main themes were the social determinants of personal and community wellbeing and their relationship to addiction, mental illness, and the risk of arrest and incarceration.

Emotional Intelligence for Law Enforcement
James D. Fouts, MSW, LSW

The greatest dilemma a Police Officer has is: Anyone you deal with may attack you, some are more likely to attack than others, you're not sure who it is or when it might happen, yet you're called to be professional and approachable to build trust and cooperation. Emotional Intelligence teaches skills that develop awareness of your emotions, manage your emotions, read others' emotions and manage the relationships needed to Police in the 21st Century.

T22

Trauma Informed Principles of Care with LGBTQ People in the Criminal Justice System
Miranda L. Galbreath, MA; Michelle Wolf, MFT

This presentation consists of five authors perspectives working with LGBTQ people who are involved in the criminal justice system. The presentation will include various components of working with LGBTQI people including the basic vocabulary of sexual orientation, and gender identity/expression (SOGIE), common attitudes and behaviors encountered, common traumas experienced and principles of trauma informed care and a discussion of current and emerging policies and procedural considerations.

T23

Problem Solving Courts, Real Solutions: The First Judicial District Mental Health Court
Patricia Wilson, MS; Joy V Walters, MSW

This presentation will present an overview of the First Judicial District Mental Health Court; details of the day to day operations and how the court has expanded since its inception. A summary of the collaborative partnerships among the various agencies will be discussed as well as the court's treatment tracks and monitoring of those tracks. In addition, several cases will be discussed, and efficacy and outcome data will be reviewed.

T24

ReLink: Expanded Reentry Services for Justice Involved Minority Youth
Cody J Poerio, MPH

Since 1991, Action Wellness has maintained a presence in the Philadelphia county jails to help people with HIV access medical care, social services and support, both pre-and post-release through the Philadelphia Linkage Program. In 2016, as part of the DHS Office of Minority Health's ReLINK initiative, Action Wellness expanded its longstanding and successful programming, to assist in smoothening the reentry of justice-involved African American, Hispanic/Latino, and other minority individuals between the ages of 18 and 26 with chronic conditions. Our workshop will be a review and discussion of our expanded ReLink Care Coach Program model, its implementation and development as well as lessons learned throughout our first year of programming.

T25

When Clients Stalk: Ethical Implications and Solutions for Practitioners
Jack Walmer, PhD; Melissa Ring, MSW

This workshop will discuss the types of behaviors that constitute the crime of stalking in Pennsylvania law, outline the reasons that clients stalk therapists, as well as the ethical and safety implications that come with being a victim of this crime. Practical response options, especially proactive preventative strategies will be presented. Participant sharing of their own examples and experiences, if desired, will be encouraged.

Re-entry Challenges for Women: The Working Together for Women Experience

Barbara Schindler, MD; Sharlene Irving, BA

Working Together for Women (WTW), a gender-sensitive, trauma-informed program was created in 2014 in Philadelphia, PA to provide addiction and psychiatric recovery-focused treatment combined with community-based outreach, peer support and case management for women being released from incarceration. WTW's goals are to help incarcerated women with a history of substance use disorders, many with coexisting psychiatric and medical disorders, navigate their challenging reentry and reintegration into the community, promote retention in addiction treatment, facilitate reunification with children/families, and reduce relapse and recidivism. Addressing these reentry needs was equally as challenging for the program and treatment staff. This workshop will delineate the challenges faced by both reentering women and their families and the WTW staff and solutions developed to meet these challenges.

Elephants in the Forest: A Nature-based Prisoner Re-Entry Program

Tina Bloom, PhD; GA Bradshaw, PhD

A key challenge that former prisoners face is cultivating psychosocial development and skills that lead to meaningful, positive and grounded lives. A re-entry program that uses science and natural history of elephants, orcas, sharks and other animals will be presented. The goal of this program is to teach prisoners self-development, empathy, stress regulation and interpersonal skills including facial and emotional recognition.

T32

Why Continuous Improvement Tools and Systems Produce Poor Results in a Forensic Treatment Setting.

Jason James Reines, MPA, MBA

No matter how hard a provider may try, their continuous improvement efforts may not reach the goals the court or advocates may wish. Research has found a list of common barriers which prevents different continuous improvement methods from reaching their true potential. Participants will learn how avoided those barriers and maximize the effectiveness of treatment to forensic patients using different continuous improvement methods.

T33

Reflections of men and women serving life sentences: 25 years later

Howard Zehr, PhD; Lance Couturier, PhD; Lorraine Stutzman Amstutz; Ellen Melchiondo

Approximately 25 years ago Howard Zehr conducted structured interviews and took portrait photographs with 58 men and women offenders in the PA DOC. These interviews and photos are presented in Doing life: reflections of men and women serving life sentences. In 2017 the presenter completed follow-up interviews and photographs with 25+ of the previous participants at SCI-Graterford, Muncy, Cambridge, and Camp Hill who were still incarcerated. This workshop will present those new portraits and summarize some the themes: many the men and women work as Certified Peer Specialists, train helper dogs, and talk about other strategies to "give back to society." Results will be discussed considering Erik Erickson's 7th and 8th stages of psychosocial growth.

T34

Re-entry Revision: Learning from the Past, Preparing for the Future

Jamar D Williams

In this workshop, we will shatter the re-entry horizon of yesteryear through the perspective of one who successfully re-entered society. We begin with taking a glimpse at the ineffective methods surrounding the history of pre/post-release before focusing on the present practices that have gained traction today. But most importantly, we will direct our gaze toward the future horizon of re-entry, learning how to restore countless lives utilizing a humanistic approach.

T35

Successful Sexual Issues Treatment Completion in as Little as 6 Months: The Benefit of Trauma Informed Approach

Dominick DiSalvo, MA, LPC; Thespina Godshalk, MA, LPC

Learn the five advantages of a treatment approach based on a data driven trauma informed model, including a reduction in overall length of stay for clients with sexual issues. This session includes a case study of an individual who completed the redesigned program in six months and returned home including an innovative approach to aftercare. Successful treatment is holistic, infusing the principles of healthy community interactions, evidence based interventions and life skills development.

LGBTQIA+ 4 L. E.? 10-4!

Patricia Poloka, MS

The LGBTQIA+ community must be treated with dignity and respect by law enforcement officers. Police agencies not providing appropriate training may find themselves with unintended consequences while LGBTQIA+ individuals suffer trauma from improper treatment by law enforcement officers. Targets of violence by non-affirming family members and victims of hate crimes may lead to health disparities and mental health concerns such as anxiety, depression, vulnerable homeless youth and suicidal ideation.

T42

All Paws on Deck: An Introduction to Service Dogs, Therapy Dogs, Courthouse Dogs and Emotional Support Animals.

Miranda L. Galbreath, MA

Service Animals, Therapy Dogs, Courthouse Dogs and Emotional Support Animals provide unique opportunities for individuals involved in the criminal justice system. This workshop will assist participants in understanding the specific supports and benefits provided by each type of animal, the training and development process for each type of animal and the rights granted to individuals working with these animals. This workshop will also review several types of prison puppy programs currently in existence in POA.

T43

Successful Transition from Prison to Residential Program

Fanta M Richardson, MHS; Marlene Greene, MA

When individuals with mental health disabilities enter the Philadelphia Correctional System, their discharge planning begins. This presentation will describe the transition from the Forensic Rehabilitative Residence (CPR) in Philadelphia. At times, the re-entry initiative can pose a challenge for all parties involved. Our goal is to walk the attendees through the process from receiving the TOP referral, the interview process, the admission process and the post admission challenges. In addition, the techniques needed to maneuver through the various systems will be discussed.

T44

"4 plays" of Crisis De-escalation in Corrections

Rhonda Tomcavage; Lt. Virgil Meyer

This session is designed to provide an understanding of CIT in a correctional setting. During the presentation participants will gain a brief overview of the Memphis model of CIT, how it was created, and how it is currently being implemented in a Correctional setting. Participants will be able to identify signs of a crisis, become familiar with the "4 plays" of de-escalation and learn effective tools in dealing with offenders in crisis to minimize the use of force and enhance safety for offenders and correctional staff.

T45

Corrections Fatigue: Implications for Administrators and Staff

Tricia Mikolon, PhD

Corrections fatigue is the cumulative impact of the social environment on correctional staff resulting in detrimental physical, emotional and psychological issues. The impact of the social environment on staff, with highlights from a study completed by the presenter and corrections officers will be discussed. Group differences on specific aspects of the social environment will be examined and implications for both administrators and staff will be highlighted.

In order to be environmentally conscious, attendees will be able to electronically access handout slides prior to the conference. Information on how to access will be mailed to you upon confirmation of your registration.
