

PHILOSOPHY

The study of philosophy involves the extensive use and development of the skills of rational inquiry and dialogue in the widest variety of human circumstances and issues. The study of philosophy enhances a person's sense of his or her own values, goals, prospects and possibilities in life.

Philosophy can enhance a student's education and life in ways that are hard to quantify. These have to do with coming to understand oneself and others better; being more open to experiences in life that are especially challenging; developing a sharper ability to think for oneself, and being better prepared to reflect critically and creatively upon questions we confront as persons, as citizens and as human beings.

The Philosophy program currently offers two philosophy certificates: Philosophy in the Arts and Humanities and Philosophy in Science and Technology.

Students wanting specific information about the major are encouraged to stop by the department office in MacAlister Hall room 5044, call the department at 215.895.2431, or visit their website at drexel.edu/engphil.
