

GLOBAL STUDIES

Global studies is an intercultural and interactive major that links language study, international travel and academic study across diverse disciplines to prepare students to thrive in today's globalized world.

Global Business, Economics and Development – This concentration is for students interested in careers linked to the global economy, where regional knowledge, intercultural competency, and writing and language skills are highly valued.

Global Justice and Human Rights – This concentration connects students with important new global issues, such as the growth of international nongovernmental organizations (NGOs), international peacekeeping, and international legal bodies.

Global Sustainability and Health – This concentration provides a solid social science and humanities education, along with a grounding in the scientific and technical aspects of global development and trans-boundary environmental issues. Language courses and courses in sociology, anthropology, politics, history and other fields prepare students to be global citizens and to have a knowledge of diverse cultures and global governance.

Global Media, Arts and Cultures – This concentration allows students to develop a major around their language studies, putting greater emphasis on the cultural life associated with the language and its regions.

Students who want specific information about the major are encouraged to stop by the department office in 3031 MacAlister Hall, call the department at 215.895.6794, or visit the department's website at drexel.edu/globalstudies.
