

SOCIOLOGY

In Drexel's Department of Sociology, faculty and students study social behavior and structural inequality in order to address contemporary social challenges. Sociology majors and minors are trained to identify hidden biases embedded in social norms, policies and institutions, which often privilege certain groups while making others vulnerable. Under the guidance of faculty, students develop strong skills in critical thinking, research design, research methods, data analysis, writing, and public speaking.

Faculty members are dedicated public sociologists who aim to bring their research to audiences beyond the academic community and apply their findings to current social problems. The department's research strengths lie in environmental sociology, medical sociology, and urban sociology.

Students interested in specific information about the major are encouraged to stop by the department office at 3600 Market Street, 7th Floor. You are also encouraged to call 215.895.1214 or visit drexel.edu/sociology.
