

FOOD RECOVERY NETWORK

FIGHTING WASTE. FEEDING PEOPLE.

MEAL AND FOOD DONATION

SUMMARY

Drexel Campus Dining is fighting hunger in the local community and partnering with the Food Recovery Network. Drexel students are engaged in the food donation process by volunteering to pick-up and deliver food donations. This student opportunity promotes civic engagement and creates a stronger student-community ecosystem.

IMPACT

Aramark's registered dietitian, Mackenzie Proctor, and two Drexel students, Griffin Wong from Drexel Hunger and Homelessness Prevention and Evan Ehlers from Sharing Excess, work together to pick up and deliver campus food donations to the Food Recovery Network. Thanks to our participation in this program, 1,920 pounds of food have been donated to-date (since September 2017).

NEXT STEPS

Aramark and Drexel will continue to work together to combat hunger in the local community while seeking new opportunities to make even more of an impact.
