Undergraduate Level Program. Through my activities with the Draw the Lines (DTL) Steering Committee for the Eastern Region of Pennsylvania, I have developed a course project that is used in a variety of my classes including PSCI 100. This activity is related to an effort to address gerrymandering, primarily in PA with connections nationwide. In the past, this has related to the US Congressional (House) level but starting this year (2020) it will also address the state legislative districts. My students have been award winners in the DTL competitions related to congressional district mapping. This activity uses computerized mapping techniques. AY 18 to present.

Undergraduate Level Program. I continue to integrate off-campus activities with my PSCI 100 classes (Face to Face and Online) in a program for them to engage with the outside political world through attending a public meeting (City Council Session) or a trial assignment in which they had to develop a report about the experience. Started in the last decade and continues AY18-19.

Undergraduate Level Program. I developed a new methodology for teaching Global Classrooms and implemented it when partnered with University of Istanbul. Fall, 2018.

Undergraduate Level Program. I significantly revised my course for Political Communication. This included a major revision of a course I originally designed. This was for Fall, 2017.

Teaching- Survey Research Center. As Director of the Survey Research Center, in the past I have provided survey research instruction in a wide variety of undergraduate and graduate level courses and support to faculty and administration throughout the University. This activity included, but was not limited to, presenting lectures in other faculty members regularly scheduled courses on survey research, developing student survey projects for classroom instruction, and presenting the techniques of data analysis in the social sciences.

Teaching - Computer applications. In addition to the simulation listed below, in virtually all of the courses that I teach I utilize computers technology. I also provide training on the use of the Internet for research purposes. I have also developed a "Virtual Classroom" for education purposes.

1994 "Virtual Classroom" Drexel University. Supported by the Pew Charitable Trust Foundation. 1994. (Videotape available)

1984 "Reapportionment Simulation: A Microcomputer Application to Election Studies." Drexel University. 1984.

Teaching - Faculty Mentoring Program. From 1994 to 1996 I have provided mentoring assistance to faculty at Drexel University regarding their use of computers for both teaching and research. This program began in 1994. I continue in an informal fashion to be engaged in this activity.

"A Visit to a Focus Group". Wrote, produced and directed film. Fall 2004. This film is shown in undergraduate and graduate research methods courses.
