Kirk Heilbrun is currently Professor in the Department of Psychological and Brain Sciences at Drexel University, where he served as department head from 1999-2012 and 2014-2016. Previously he was staff psychologist, then chief psychologist, at the Forensic Service, Florida State Hospital, and clinical director of the Forensic Unit, Central State Hospital (Petersburg, VA). He is board certified in clinical psychology and in forensic psychology by the American Board of Professional Psychology, and is a Fellow of the American Psychological Association in six divisions. He currently directs a forensic assessment clinic in the Drexel Department of Psychological and Brain Sciences; the clinic provides psychological evaluations to courts and attorneys on issues that include juvenile commitment and decertification, competence to stand trial, mental state at the time of the offense, federal sentencing, capital sentencing, workplace disability, violence risk assessment, and malpractice. He also directs the Reentry Project, which provides pro bono assessment and treatment services to justice-involved individuals returning to the community from federal prison, to individuals under the jurisdiction of a federal mental health court, and to individuals who have been exonerated following conviction and incarceration. Since completing a postdoctoral fellowship in psychology and law in 1982, Dr. Heilbrun has been involved in personally conducting or supervising approximately 3,100 forensic evaluations at the request of courts, defense, and prosecution, and has testified as an expert approximately 310 times at the request of both the defense and the prosecution. He has been qualified as an expert in federal court, and in state-level courts in Florida, New York, Pennsylvania, and Virginia.
