CURRENT POSITION

DREXEL UNIVERSITY

Assistant Professor (2014-present)

- I teach classes in:
 - Human Development
 - Research Methods & Measurement
 - Introduction to Biostatistics
 - Child Psychopathology and Diagnosis
 - Adult Psychopathology and Diagnosis
 - Attachment, Emotions, and Psychotherapy
 - Attachment-Based Family Therapy

- I direct the Attachment, Caregiving and Emotions Lab where, together with students and research assistants, I study healthy emotional development in childhood and adolescence and the impact of parenting and parent-child relationships on development and mental health. I have a particular focus on studying these relationships and processes within youth, parents and families coping with various forms of social marginalization, including poverty, discrimination, and race/ethnicity-related stress. My program of research also focuses on translating findings from basic scientific research into prevention and support programs for youth and families.

FORMER PROFESSIONAL POSITIONS

DREXEL UNIVERSITY

Research Psychologist (2013-2014)

Co-Investigator and Project Coordinator for NIMH R01 randomized controlled clinical trial investigating the efficacy of Attachment-Based Family Therapy (ABFT) for adolescents with severe suicide ideation and depression.

CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL OF PHILADELPHIA

Postdoctoral Fellow (2011-2013)

Project Coordinator for NIMH R01 randomized controlled clinical trial investigating the efficacy of Attachment-Based Family Therapy (ABFT) for adolescents with severe suicide ideation and depression.

TEMPLE UNIVERSITY

Psychology Intern (2010-2011)

UNIVERSITY OF DELAWARE

Graduate Research Assistant (2005-2011)

Assistant on an NIMH R01 (Carroll E. Izard, Ph.D., PI) investigating an emotions-based preventative intervention for Head Start children, aimed at increasing young children's ability to recognize emotions, utilize emotions adaptively, enhance learning, and boost social skills. Led the parent research team for this study and designed and conducted a multi-method longitudinal study to investigate affective, cognitive, and physiological correlates of sensitive parenting and related adaptive psychological outcomes in our sample of Head Start mothers and their children.
