

Location of Bank Routing/Transit Number and Checking Account Number on Your Personal Checks

The routing number is always 9 digits located between the symbols pictured above

If your bank specifies a different R/T number near the bank name, use that instead

The position of the account number and the check number are sometimes reversed

The check number matches the number in the upper-right corner of your check

Do not include the check number as part of your account number

If you have any questions regarding the correct routing number and account number to be used for direct deposit, please contact your bank for assistance.
