Dornsife Open Rank Tenure-Track Faculty Position

Deadline: Applications will be reviewed until position is filled

The Department of Health Management and Policy invites applications for an open-rank tenure-track faculty position. We seek creative scholars eager to contribute to the culture of the department and school and who have either demonstrated experience or an established impactful career in health policy or health services research, broadly defined. For a full description of the qualifying areas of interest, please follow the link below.

Qualifications

We encourage applications from candidates in disciplines whose work advances public health, social justice, and racial/gender equity. Candidates should have earned a doctorate in policy or health services research, or related fields, such as geography, sociology, psychology, anthropology, environmental justice, etc.

Candidates should demonstrate:

• Commitment to conducting rigorous, high-level research, including the production of policy-relevant scholarly publications;
• Track-record for, or show the potential to, receive external funding;
• Success in collaboration, teamwork, and mentoring; and
• Commitment to working with community partners and/or policy makers to advance antiracism and social justice.

Senior rank applicants may have the opportunity to provide leadership to existing or newly developed research centers.

Dornsife School of Public Health

Ranked among the top 25 programs nationwide, the school was founded on the principle of health as a human right. The Dornsife School of Public Health (DSPH) focuses on many public health areas but has a special commitment to eliminating health inequities and translating evidence into action. DSHOP also has a unique commitment to public health practice and experiential learning and is committed to creating a pluralistic and inclusive environment for faculty, professional staff, and students.

To Apply

Interested candidates should submit a cover letter and curriculum vitae. The cover letter should describe relevant experience, goals, teaching/mentoring philosophy, and commitment to inclusive excellence. Letters of recommendation will be requested at later stages of this job search process.

Review of candidates begins: December 1, 2022

Submit materials here: APPLY TODAY!

Confidential informal queries are welcomed by the search committee Chair, Mariana Chilton, PhD, MPH mmc33@drexel.edu. Applications will be accepted until successful candidates have been identified.