Fire service Injury Research, Epidemiology and Evaluation fellowship (FIRE Fellows)

I developed and funded the FIRE Fellowship program through external grants. FIRE Fellows analyze data for fire departments and learn about the fire service through field immersion. Fellows were competitively selected to create an interdisciplinary cohort of graduate students from the Dornsife School of Public Health. Fellows represent different degree programs, departments, and stages of public health experience (including alumni).*

Academic Portfolio Mentees - Drexel University

Portfolios are evidence-based documents that allow faculty members go beyond their vita and highlight the most important aspects of their professional accomplishments and contain both formative and summative aspects. Academic portfolios provide an opportunity to highlight key components of teaching, research, scholarship and service in a cohesive manner while providing an opportunity for reflection on past accomplishments with an eye towards future professional goals. Through the Drexel Center for Academic Excellence, I serve as a faculty mentor. In 2017, the program was renamed CANOPI: Creating a Narrative of Professional Involvement.

Dissemination and Impact of Research Through Practice and Media

Impact is an expected outcome of research activity, but assessment metrics are underdeveloped. The following categories express the impact of my current research activities with communities through practice activities and media dissemination.

Practice

National Conference Planning

Developed and Convened the invitation-only “Systems Checklist Consensus Conference (SC3) on Stress and Violence to fire-based EMS Responders (SAVER).” July 15-17, 2018. Drexel University, Philadelphia, PA.

FOCUS Culture Camps

Culture Camps are educational classes I developed to train fire departments and unions. Through an introductory course followed by an advanced course, Culture Camps convey competencies in understanding the utility of the FOCUS safety climate survey; how to gather FOCUS data in departments; and how to analyze, interpret, and use the data through in-class teach backs. The advanced course focuses on intervention design, implementation, and evaluation to create and maintain positive safety climate. All training sessions are instructed by FDSOA Executive Director Chief Rich Marinucci, myself, FIRST Center staff, and organizational scientists who have deep knowledge of safety culture interventions and how to implement them in the fire service. Past and future events are listed.
