

In celebration of Native American Heritage Month
Drexel University is pleased to present

A discussion with acclaimed Peruvian Andean poet Odi Gonzales, author of Birds on the Kiswar Tree

With Drexel adjunct associate professor of English Lynn Levin, translator of Birds on the Kiswar Tree

Moderated by Drexel adjunct instructor of Spanish
Roger Santiváñez, Peruvian poet and scholar

Welcome by Dr. Abioseh Porter, head of Drexel's
English and Philosophy Department

The Drexel community is invited to attend a lunchtime discussion with acclaimed Peruvian Andean poet Odi Gonzales, whose poetry collection Birds on the Kiswar Tree (2Leaf Press, 2014) was just published in a bilingual Spanish/English edition with English translation by Lynn Levin.

The poems in Birds on the Kiswar Tree address cultural pressures that the indigenous Quechua fine artists of Peru endured under Spanish colonial rule.

The event will include a discussion with the poet, a bilingual reading, and book signing. Dessert and beverages will be provided. You are invited to bring a "brown bag" lunch.

TIME

12:00 - 1:30pm

DATE

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 2014

WHERE

James E. Marks
Intercultural Center
3225 Arch St. Philadelphia, PA

RSVP to Dr. Millie Carvalho-Grevious, mjc395@drexel.edu, tel: 215-571-3839.
The first 20 people to respond will receive a free copy of Birds on the Kiswar Tree, compliments of the Office of International Programs.

Sponsored by Drexel's Office of Equality and Diversity, Student Center for Inclusion and Culture, Office of International Programs, Office of Faculty Development & Equity, and the Department of English and Philosophy