The A.J. Drexel Autism Institute was founded 11 years ago as the first autism research center in the US to focus on public health research in autism. Our work is grounded in community engagement, and many of the research questions from our transdisciplinary team address issues at the population level. Our mission is to pioneer research to better understand autism and drive impactful change in our communities and worldwide.

Come stop by to learn more and see what opportunities might be available for you as a graduate student at Drexel.

We are a graduate-level student organization dedicated to bridging the gap between academic knowledge and the early stages of your career. At Drexel CCG, we believe that understanding the challenges faced by recent graduates is as important as your academic and institutional experiences. Stop by at our table to chat with us and join us to take the next step in your career journey!
