Jordan Fischer focuses her research on data privacy and cybersecurity, bringing an interdisciplinary approach to her pedagogy. Professor Fischer explores the convergence of the law and technology, researching the practical implications of regional data protection regulations within a backdrop of the global economy. She applies her experience working with multinational companies to better understand the evolution of security and privacy within changing regulatory and legal frameworks to balance consumer and end-user rights with enterprise innovation and efficiencies.

Professor Fischer clerked at the Court of Justice of the European Union in Luxembourg City, Luxembourg for Koen Lenaerts, who is now the president-judge of the court. Jordan is also a Cybersecurity Lecturer at UC Berkeley.

In addition to teaching, Professor Fischer is the Global Privacy Team Lead at Beckage, a boutique international and domestic data security and privacy law firm. She focuses her practice on international data privacy, cybersecurity and cross-border data management. Professor Fischer's background in business and technology enables her to provide critical legal guidance to balance business growth and development with data management.
