

FOREWORD

As editors of the seventh volume of the Drexel Law Review, we have the distinct honor and great privilege of briefly serving as stewards of a journal that has accomplished much in a short time. In our roles, we have had the advantage of a tangible closeness to the journal's mission from its very beginnings. In his foreword to the inaugural issue of Drexel Law Review, Honorable Anthony J. Scirica asserted that “[n]ew technology has forever altered the communication of legal developments and ideas.”¹ Law reviews across the country have begun to expand their virtual presences by publishing online companion journals. With Drexel Law Review Online, we too hope to embrace the opportunities provided by an additional online presence to further support our members' participation in scholarly legal discourse.
