The Lindy Center for Civic Engagement fosters a culture of civic responsibility by providing programs and resources that empower Drexel students and the broader university community to expand their civic identities through engagement in mutually-beneficial partnerships that lead to a more just society.

LEARN

- Start your journey in CIVC 101, Drexel's introductory civic engagement course which is designed to help all students understand basic principles and develop skills as active citizens through direct service and reflection opportunities.

- Enroll in a Community-Based Learning course; these courses are opportunities for Drexel students to explore issues impacting local, national, and global communities while engaging with partner organizations that address those issues. Some courses involve engagement experiences such as volunteering outside of the classroom, while others, called “Side-By-Side courses,” bring the community into the classroom as Drexel students learn alongside community members also enrolled in the course.

- Participate in civic engagement programming including the First Friday open house series, political engagement programming and more.

- Earn the Civic Learning and Engagement Certificate, a not-for-credit program consisting of three core workshops and three elective workshops.

LEAD

- Apply to be a Drexel Community Scholar who provides 5-15 hours per week of either direct service or capacity building support to a non-profit organization.

- Apply to be a Lindy Scholars Program Advisor who provides tutoring and mentoring to middle school youth twice weekly after-school and on selected Saturdays.

- Apply to be a Teaching Assistant for CIVC 101, Drexel's first-year civic engagement course.

- Apply to be a member of our Student Leadership Board.

SERVE

- Get connected to one-time and reoccurring community service opportunities through our civic engagement database.

- Track community service hours via the DragonLink portal. Earn the President's Volunteer Service Award or Global Volunteer Service Award for serving 100+ hours during the academic year.

- Engage in an intensive service immersion experience through an Alternative Break program.
