A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

One Time Ends, Another Begins

As we come to the end of our fiscal year on June 30, with 2020 just six months away, we invite and encourage you to invest in completing the unfinished business of women's equality with a contribution to Vision 2020.

With graduation season wrapping up this month, I am reflecting again on the significance of "commencement" and the importance of using what we've learned from the past as we embark on new ventures. That thinking applies to Vision 2020's Women 100: A National Celebration of American Women next year as well as to our personal lives.

Planning for Vision 2020's Women 100 interactive educational exhibition, "A Seat at the Table," which will be a centerpiece of our year-long activities, is well underway. Scheduled to open to the public on March 1, 2020, the exhibition will occupy much of the vast lobby space in the Kimmel Center for the Performing Arts in Philadelphia and will be up through September. It is designed to inform and educate the public, from middle schoolers on up, about the historic contributions of American women, the current status of women's leadership and the unfinished business of women's equality. It is intended to inspire visitors to increase their civic engagement, as voters and leaders in their communities.

One surprising element of the exhibition is the inclusion of three bicycles, and this has taught me something I did not know. When the bicycle became popular in the 1890s, a quarter century before women could vote, it opened up new possibilities for women. Women now had more freedom in how they dressed, changing from the restrictive, modest fashion of the Victorian age into outfits that (gasp) exposed their ankles and bloomers. More important, bicycles gave women a new means of transportation independence.
In The Atlantic's How the Bicycle Paved the Way for Women's Rights, Adrienne LaFrance writes: "Imagine what it must have felt like -- in an age when American women were still decades from the right to vote and inundated with men's opinions about their ankles -- for a woman to go outside, hop on her bicycle and ride as fast as she could wherever she wanted, leaving the rest of the world wondering where she might go."

Vision 2020 News

Why Some Are Celebrating the 19th Amendment's 100th Anniversary This Month

As CBS News reported earlier this month, the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution celebrated a "big birthday" on June 4. One hundred years ago, on June 4, 1919, the U.S. Senate voted in favor of the 19th Amendment, following the House of Representatives' passage of it two weeks earlier.

This move by Congress laid the foundation for states to begin voting on the amendment. Soon after Congress passed the 19th Amendment on June 4, 1919, several states followed with their support, but it wasn't until 14 months later in August 1920 that the required number of states -- three-fourths of them, or 36 states at that time -- passed the amendment and it was ratified into the Constitution.

Do you know when your home state voted in favor of women's right to vote?

Today, Pennsylvania is celebrating the 100th anniversary of its ratification, and Lynn Yeakel is in the Capitol Rotunda in Harrisburg participating on behalf of Vision 2020.

Delegates in Pittsburgh Mark 100 Years of Pennsylvania's Support for Women's Right to Vote

Vision 2020 Pennsylvania Delegates are collaborating with The Frick Pittsburgh museums and gardens on a panel discussion to recognize the suffragists who fought for women's right to vote, urge women to shape the future by exercising their right to vote, learn about Vision 2020's Women 100 and the City of Pittsburgh's Gender Equity Commission (GEC), and understand how supporting women and girls can help create a more successful and equitable environment for all citizens.

Taking place on Tuesday, June 25, at 6 p.m., this discussion will also commemorate the 100th anniversary of the date that Pennsylvania voted in favor of ratification of the 19th Amendment.
19th Amendment (June 24, 1919). Pennsylvania was the seventh state in the country to support the 19th Amendment, 14 months before it passed at the federal level and was signed into law nationwide on August 26, 1920.

Thinking and Acting Like the Majority We Are: An Interview With Lynn Yeakel

"I care deeply about men being a part of the solution. My father was my role model, I've been married many years, and I have a son who I'm very proud of, and I have four grandsons. For shared leadership to work, men have to be involved and see it as a benefit. I believe we are women and men by chance; we're sisters and brothers by choice."

The Epic Political Battle Over the Legacy of the Suffragists

"By and large, white American suffragists were racist, arguing that giving the vote to white women would cancel out the influence of newly enfranchised black men. This was as much a matter of political strategy as personal prejudice ... Even after the Nineteenth Amendment was ratified, many states passed laws limiting the voting rights of black Americans, including black women."

The 'Undesirable Militants' Behind the 19th Amendment

"Women finally secured the right to vote nationwide in 1920, but black women were for decades after that routinely turned away from the ballot box. Only in 1965, with the Voting Rights Act, and with subsequent court decisions, were the tools of disenfranchisement that targeted people of color -- including poll taxes and literacy tests -- outlawed. The centennial of the Nineteenth Amendment's passage is an occasion for celebration, but it is also a cause for inquiry."

Parenthood Is Still Uneven, but an Hour a Day Could Help

"Women still spend way more time than men, up to 10 times as much, on unpaid tasks like child care and senior care, as well as on volunteer work and domestic chores. In order to tip the scales toward parity in the homes of heterosexual couples, the report says that men would need to spend at least 50 more minutes a day caring for children and households -- and women, 50 minutes less."

Women Reach Their Earnings Peak 11 Years Before Men and Are Paid $35,000 Less, Survey Show

"A typical college-educated woman's earnings peak at $66,700 when she is 44 years old. Men achieve their earnings peak at age 55 -- 11 years later -- at $101,200."

Money Is Not Just for Men

"Women keep 71 percent of their money in cash, compared with men's 60 percent. Women also retire with just two-thirds of the money men do, though they live five years longer."
The U.S. national women's soccer team scored more goals in one game than the men's team has in every World Cup since 2006 combined. It beat Thailand's team 13-0 on June 11, the largest margin of victory ever at the World Cup.

As reported by Vox, "despite the women's history of successes on the field, the U.S. Soccer Federation pays women players far less than men -- in fact, the group pays men more when they lose than it pays women when they win."
